low was surely intolerable, and, next after Clayton, was morally less fitted for official position than any creature, man or devil, that was ever lifted above his fellows, in earth, hell or heaven. Bad as we thought the condition of Tennessee, that of Louisiana must be worse, a thousand-fold worse. We willingly made sacrifices to assure the overthrow of Brownlow, but it never occurred to us that, to escape this thraldom, we could be induced to approve the suggestions of a distinguished Louisianian. Colonel J. N. Marks, in a recent speech in New Orleans, said: "I see it also charged that I am endeaving or intending to carry the Reform party over to the support of General Grant for the presidency. I never entertained such as idea or uttered such a sentiment, I said that I was willing, as a citizen, as an individual, to sacrifice everthing save honor, to redeem the State of Louisians. (Cheers.)
